

Meals on Wheels and More

SEEKS FIVE MILLIONAIRES

Throughout history, great cities have flourished because of inspired acts of personal generosity.

Because a large segment of our population is approaching retirement age, this at-risk population will only increase.

Over the past several years, a handful of our city's most generous citizens have contributed well over $100 million to the expansion of sports and art facilities in Austin.

While these important cultural institutions grow, some of our most vulnerable neighbors are being overlooked. Thousands of seniors, disabled persons, and low-income children—many of whom live in isolation—are going hungry every day.

Now we at Austin's own Meals on Wheels and More are asking you to make a bold commitment to those we serve with your donation toward the completion of a $5-million, 21,000-square-foot addition to our East Austin headquarters and kitchen.

This simple metal building will not be a grand monument, but it answers a great and growing need among Austin's forgotten citizens. Great cities cannot be truly great without generosity. We ask for your support.

NO PREVIOUS PHILANTHROPIC EXPERIENCE REQUIRED.

Will you help us? I'm Dan Pruett, CEO, and whether you're a millionaire or not, I ask for your help. I deliver meals every Friday, and I invite you to join me so you can see firsthand the needs in our community. Just call me at (512) 476-6325 and let's arrange to spend one very rewarding hour together. To learn more, visit www.compassionbuilds.org.